PREFACE.

My First Anglo-Saxon Reader is, for practical reasons, restricted to the West-Saxon dialect. But the other Old-English dialects are of equal—if not even more—value to the historical student of English. Hence the necessity of a supplementary archaic and dialectal Reader. The primary object of the present book is, accordingly, to give the student—as far as the often scanty materials will allow—the means of making himself acquainted with the leading features of the non-West-Saxon dialects of Old English.

As the texts are intended mainly for linguistic students, they are taken exclusively from those which are preserved in contemporary (or practically contemporary, as in the case of the Erfurt glossary) MSS. As this book is of no use except for advanced students, I have thought it advisable to print the texts exactly as they appear in the MSS., and have therefore refrained from adding any theoretical accents. Expanded contractions are printed in italics. Letters not in the MSS. are enclosed in [ ]. Erasures are marked by (:). A prefixed star calls attention to an erroneous or anomalous form, being thus equivalent to 'sic.' In the glossaries corrections of the Latin forms are added in ( ).

Another object of this book is to serve as a cheap and handy abridgment of my Oldest English Texts[1], a work whose bulk and costliness puts it beyond the reach of the ordinary student. It is this consideration which has induced me to include the whole of the Epinal-Erfurt and Corpus glossaries, unsuited as they undoubtedly are for the purpose of an ordinary Reader. Students whose object is merely to get a general idea of the dialects, are therefore advised not to attempt to read these glossaries through, but to pick out those words which they easily recognize in the first twenty pages or so, and concentrate their attention on them. Note that the English words in the Erfurt glossary printed in italics are partial or complete Germanisms of the Old High German scribe.

All the texts are complete in themselves with the exception of the extracts from the Liber Vitae (4) and the Durham and Rushworth glosses (8). The Hymns in the Vespasian Psalter are given in full, no extracts from the Psalms themselves being given.

The following texts are taken from the Oldest English Texts: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, together with the first thirty charters, whose numbers in the Oldest English Texts are added in parentheses. The extracts from the Durham and Rushworth Gospels (8, 9) are taken from the new edition in preparation by Prof. Skeat, proof sheets of which he very kindly placed at my disposal for the present work. The Kentish Glosses (10) are mainly from Prof. Zupitza's edition in Haupt's Zeitschrift. The charters from 31 to the end are from copies I made some years ago, in pursuance of a now abandoned intention of editing a collection of the post-Alfredian charters. The student must be warned that the dialectal element in these later charters is often strongly mixed with—if not almost entirely supplanted by—literary Saxonisms.

Not wishing indefinitely to increase the bulk of this work, or delay its publication, I have in this first edition given simply the texts without grammatical introduction, notes, or glossary. Now that Sievers's Anglo-Saxon Grammar has been made accessible to the English reader in Cook's translation, the first would, indeed, be almost superfluous. What form the notes and glossary will take in any future edition, I cannot say at present. This will depend mainly on the direction of my own studies, which again will partly depend on external circumstances over which I have but a limited control.

HENRY SWEET.
